

Col. Marc Warren, former Staff Judge Advocate for Multi-National Forces in Iraq, spoke on “Legal Support in Wartime: Reflections of a Judge Advocate” on Monday, February 11, 2008, at Saxbe Auditorium in the Moritz College of Law. Warren served as the top legal advisor for Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, commander of coalition forces in Iraq in 2003-04.

Marc Warren also held a roundtable discussion on February 11, 2008, with Mershon Center faculty, graduate students and post-doctoral fellows, along with guests from other departments. Warren answered questions about his service during the first year of the Iraq War, a critical period when American forces set up the Iraqi constitution and captured Saddam Hussein, and when the counterinsurgency took root and the Abu Ghraib scandal became public.

Marc Warren was brought to The Ohio State University by Gregory Travalio (right), Lawrence D. Stanley Professor of Law. His visit was also sponsored by the Military Law Students Association.
